Recent NARO Publications
North American River Otter (Lontra canadensis)
2016 - 2019 (as of July 2019)

2016

Auglier, B. (2016). River otters are back! UC Santa Cruz, Science Communication Program. University of California. Santa Cruz, California.

Bicher, N.R. (2016). River otter (Lontra canadensis) distribution and habitat availability in Nebraska. M.S., University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Lincoln, Nebraska. Digital Commons @ University of Nebraska-Lincoln, Nebraska.

North Dakota Game and Fish. (2016). Game and Fish considering river otter season. Available At: https://gr.nd.gov/magazine/2016/nov/otter-season

Wilkie, S., (2016). Mercury and selenium in trapped river otter (Lontra canadensis) from central Saskatchewan. An overview of a project in the Department of Biology, University of Regina. Regina, Canada.

2017

Available At: blog.healthywildlife.ca/accidental-bycatches-identify-rare-returns-river-otters-pei/

2018

Available At: www.saltscapes.com/roots-folks/958-shr-otter-know-html

Available At: http://osf.10/dfkzb/#i
2019
(as of July 2019)

Crowley, S.M. and D.P. Hodder. (2019). Factors influencing exposure of North America river otter (Lontra canadensis) and American mink (Neovision vison) to mercury relative to a large-scale reservoir. Ecotoxicology, 1-11.

